Malachi Graham

new old songs of itinerant Americana

Malachi Graham writes and performs new old songs steeped in history, poetry, old-time Americana, and her own Portland roots. With a voice that is equal parts Loretta Lynn and 1920's chanteuse, Malachi sings of abandonment, joy, and teeth; women fierce, sorrowful, and dead; sleepers and hauntings; travels to far-off places and the inevitable return home.

The heir apparent of a fearsome Oregonian matriarchy of myth-making women, Malachi writes songs that travel from place to place– between genres, down blue highways, across eras; songs that are both arresting and familiar. Malachi departed to study history in Maine, but discovered that the rope tying her to her roots, instead of snapping with distance, tightened into a knot.

- Performed concerts, clubs, and coffee houses on East Coast and West Coast, in Spain
- Consistent return engagements and rebookings
- Based in Portland, Oregon
- 90+ minutes of original material
- Performs solo or with upright bass

Booking

mal@malachigraham.com 971-645-7527

website | malachigraham.com
facebook | facebook.com/malachigrahammusic twitter | twitter.com/malachi_graham
email | mal@malachigraham.com

MalachiGraham.com

for music recordings, videos, and more